MI'KMAW AUTHOR GABRIEL SIMON LAUNCHES "RED BLUE - GRAVEYARD SHIFT," DEBUTING AN ALL-NEW SUPERNATURAL COP HORROR SERIES

ATLANTIC CANADA – July 15, 2026 – Acclaimed Mi'kmaq author Gabriel Simon has officially released "Red Blue - Graveyard Shift," the first installment in his brand-new "Red Blue" supernatural police series. Coming on the heels of the successful start of his "Deadlands" zombie anthologies, this new book follows two slacker cops forced to step up when the dead rise on their shift. Simon has established himself as a highly productive voice in independent horror, blending Indigenous perspectives, neurodivergent creativity, and dark humor.

At 44 years old, Simon is breaking new ground in speculative fiction. Diagnosed with ADHD and Aspergers, Simon channels his neurodivergent traits into a hyper-focused creative process, resulting in highly detailed, rapidly written multi-perspective anthologies and novels. His books have gained rapid acclaim for their grit, multi-faceted characters, and emotional depth.

"Speculative fiction is a powerful canvas to talk about resilience," says Simon, who stands at a tall stature that mirrors the scale of his storytelling. "With my books, I wanted to explore how characters rely on their ancestral strength, communities, and land-connection to survive the ultimate breakdown of modern infrastructure. In 'Red Blue - Graveyard Shift,' we look at the desperate measures two under-prepared officers take when they're the only ones left standing between the living and the dead."
